The UK capacity market: Securing a future for gas, but at what price?

With the UK's first capacity market auction scheduled for December 2014, CCGT operators will be hoping for a game-changer that could make gas-fired power profitable once more. The capacity mechanism will offer regular payments to power plants and could incentivise investment in future gas-fired generation. But should the impending auction inspire confidence – or should the industry continue to hold its breath? Gas Strategies looks at whether the capacity market holds the answers for existing generators and new-build CCGTs.
