The Zohr field – How Eni’s discovery reshaped the East Med supply outlook

On August 30, Eni announced the largest-ever gas discovery in the Mediterranean Sea at the Zohr field, offshore Egypt. The Italian company described the 30 Tcf find as a “game changer” – and it has certainly transformed Egypt’s medium to long-term energy outlook. But Zohr also has huge implications for Cairo’s would-be gas suppliers, Cyprus and Israel. Gas Strategies investigates how all three countries might be affected by the discovery.
