FEATURE: LNG industry faces an era of profound change en route to a 'bright future'

April's LNG 18 conference in Perth, Australia came at a time of great flux for the evolving LNG industry. New waves of supply are combining with faltering demand growth to create a medium-term glut. The overarching message from Perth was that while LNG's long-term future looks bright – at least until the middle of the century, the coming five years look likely to be one of the most challenging periods in the industry's history.
