Canada approves Pacific NorthWest LNG project

Canada's federal government approved the proposed 12 mtpa Pacific NorthWest (PNW) LNG export project in British Columbia this week, moving the project one step closer to taking a final investment decision (FID).

Approval of the project led by Malaysian state-affiliated Petronas is subject to 190 separate environmental requirements aimed at minimising “adverse effects on fish, fish habitat, marine mammals, wetlands, migratory birds and human health” and other impacts.
