

24 April 2024

Contents

Adapting to the "new normal" – project developers turn a corner
Publication date: 16 January 2017

Gas Strategies Group

10 Saint Bride Street
London UK
EC4A 4AD

ISSN: 0964-8496

T: +44(0) 20 7332 9900
W: www.gasstrategies.com
Twitter @GasStrategies

Editorials

+44(0) 20 7332 9957
editor@gasstrategies.com

Subscriptions

+44(0) 20 7332 9976
subscriptions@gasstrategies.com

Adapting to the "new normal" – project developers turn a corner

After two years of painful adaptation to low oil prices, the oil and gas industry appears to be on the cusp of an upturn in project development. Oil prospects are improving following the deals reached by OPEC and non-OPEC producers to cut output. Producing companies are increasingly concerned about the impact of two years of savage capex cuts on future output and feel the need to take action. Some are anxious to move ahead with strategic projects. Most importantly, the industry is undergoing a fundamental change in mindset that is dramatically reducing the break-even cost of new projects – not just to adapt to the “new normal” of low oil prices but also to face growing competition from ever-cheaper renewables. Gas Matters examines what is behind the shift “from what to stop to what to start”.

Consulting

+44 (0) 20 7332 9900
consult@gasstrategies.com

Alphatania Training

+44 (0) 20 7332 9910
training@gasstrategies.com

Information Services

+44 (0) 20 7332 9976
subscriptions@gasstrategies.com