Pricewatch - Asian LNG prices fall as winter demand eases

Asian LNG prices are beginning to soften as winter weather subsides and demand eases amid stable to rising supply in the global market.

The monthly Singapore SInG LNG index rolled over on Tuesday, with the index for April-delivered cargoes taking over as the front-month contract and settling at USD 6.15/MMBtu – more than 15% lower than the March 2017 index during its last trading session.
