Crude oil prices yesterday thudded to a five-month low on fears of imminent lockdowns and other tighter measures to control soaring Covid-19 infection rates around the world, combined with rising US inventories due to soft fuel demand. Brent sank 5% and WTI lost 5.5% to close at USD 39.12/barrel and USD 37.39/barrel, respectively. Month-ahead Brent has not settled this low since 1 June 2020, when it hit USD 38.32/barrel.

CME's December-dated JKM futures contract fell further in yesterday's session, closing down 0.7% at USD 6.95/MMBtu to erase most of the last three sessions' gains. US gas benchmark Henry Hub fell 0.8% to USD 3.00/MMBtu, while European gas hubs NBP and TTF both fell by around 1.6% to settle at the equivalent of USD 5.39/MMBtu and USD 4.99/MMBtu.

The European carbon price fell further into bearish territory, as month-ahead ETS allowance (EUA) futures lost 4.3% to close at EUR 23.03/tonne – a price not seen since 16 June 2020.
