Kicking off 2024, Chevron reported this week that it would record non-cash, after-tax charges of between USD 3.5 billion and USD 4 billion in its upcoming Q4 results, due to regulatory changes in California and losses on previously sold Gulf of Mexico-based assets.

The raging dispute between Venture Global and its offtakers continued into the new year with Shell backing BP's recent comments to the regulator, and suggesting it initiated legal proceedings against the LNG operator.

Finally, BP and Equinor have cast doubt over the future of the Empire Wind offshore wind project offshore New York after terminating a key revenue contract linked to the project.

Here's your weekly catch up service of the top issues that made the news this week:
