LNG industry faces an era of profound change en route to a ‘bright future’ – LNG 18

The overarching message from the LNG 18 conference in Perth was that while LNG’s long-term future looks bright – at least until the middle of the century – the coming five years look likely to be the most challenging period in the industry’s history. In the first of two articles from Perth, Gas Strategies reports on the industry’s own view of its future over the medium term.
