US, Canada, Mexico to commit to 50% 'clean energy' target – White House

The leaders of the US, Canada and Mexico will this week commit to covering 50% of their power demand with “clean energy” by 2025, the US White House said in a statement.

US president Barack Obama and Mexican president Enrique Pena Nieto will travel to Ottawa on Thursday to meet with Canadian prime minister Justin Trudeau to sign the document as part of the North America Leader’s Summit, the White House said on Wednesday.
