Iran hails South Pars expansion in spite of sanctions

Ruling leaders of the Islamic Republic of Iran have hailed the inauguration of latest phases of the supergiant South Pars gas field in the Persian Gulf as a major industrial breakthrough achieved despite international sanctions.

Petroleum minister Bijan Zangeneh said over the weekend that the start of operations at South Pars (SP) phases 17 to 21 – using mostly Iranian capital, technology and human resources – is a “national honour” for the country.
