FERC at full strength in time to scrutinise controversial DoE ‘grid resiliency’ plan

The US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) is back to full strength after the Senate approved two more nominees, filling the commission’s five-seat quorum for the first time since October 2015.

The Senate’s approval of Kevin McIntyre and Rich Glick last week was welcomed by US gas industry figures as it gives FERC the manpower needed to examine US energy secretary Rick Perry’s contentious
