Trump's USD 126-billion energy deals give China plenty of wriggle room

China has pledged more than USD 126 billion in non-binding energy “deals” in the US, with proposals to invest in shale and LNG projects in the country as Washington seeks to build bridges with Beijing.

Newly-formed China Energy Investment Corp led the pack with a USD 83.7 billion potential investment in West Virginia shale, part of a slew of headline-grabbing trade announcements ...
