‘We want a bigger share for natural gas in our production mix’: Guido Brusco, Eni

Guido Brusco was appointed chief operating officer for natural resources at Italian supermajor Eni in February 2022. He began his career in the technical areas of the exploration and production business, holding positions of growing responsibility in Italy and abroad, up to the role of operations director in Egypt in 2005 and then in Kazakhstan in 2009. Brusco took up the role of managing director in Kazakhstan in 2013 and subsequently in Angola in 2015. In 2018 he was appointed executive vice president for the Sub-Saharan Africa region, and in 2020 he became Eni’s director of upstream.

In this exclusive interview, Brusco talks to LNG Business Review about Eni’s aspirations for expanding gas production in Indonesia, the company’s focus on offshore and LNG production in Africa, and how decarbonisation targets can be met against rising hydrocarbon production.
