Top news roundup: Santos revenues drop 42%, Germany gas woes, US LNG freeze to hit Mexico

As results season powered on into its third week, Australian giant Santos faced a 42% drop in profit for 2023 after being hit by lower LNG prices last year.

Venture Global's ongoing dispute with its Calcasieu Pass offtakers reached new heights as Shell expressed "deep concern" to the US regulator following a request from VG to extend its order for completion within five years.

Meanwhile, Germany's gas shortage woes continue despite weak economic growth and new floating LNG import facilities.

Also, the country's hydrogen-ready gas power plant strategy is likely not enough to shore up sufficient investment in the country's energy sector, an industry event found this week.

And the US' freeze on LNG permits could have a knock-on effect on Mexico's LNG exports.

Here's your weekly catch up service of the top issues that made the news this week:
